1. The first step is to identify the problem or question that needs to be addressed. This involves understanding the context and the specific requirements of the task.

2. The second step is to gather relevant information and resources. This may involve researching existing solutions, consulting with experts, or collecting data.

3. The third step is to develop a plan or strategy. This involves breaking down the problem into smaller, manageable tasks and determining the sequence of actions to be taken.

4. The fourth step is to implement the plan. This involves carrying out the tasks and monitoring progress to ensure that the plan is being followed.

5. The fifth step is to evaluate the results. This involves comparing the actual outcomes with the expected results and identifying any areas for improvement.

6. The sixth step is to communicate the findings. This involves sharing the results with the relevant stakeholders and providing recommendations for future action.

7. The seventh step is to reflect on the process. This involves considering what worked well, what challenges were encountered, and how the process can be improved for future tasks.

Figure 1: Schematic representation of the experimental design. The figure shows two rows of horizontal bars representing time intervals. The top row is labeled '1st' and the bottom row is labeled '2nd'. Each row contains four bars. The first bar in each row is labeled '1st' and the second bar is labeled '2nd'. The third bar in each row is labeled '3rd' and the fourth bar is labeled '4th'. The bars are connected by lines, indicating a sequence of events. The top row is labeled '1st' and the bottom row is labeled '2nd'.
